2				Excellent	75%	100%	100%	The training program was highly informative, well-structured, and relevant to the evolving needs of the judicial system. To further improve it, more practical, hands-on sessions should be included, particularly on the use of AI tools in judicial proceedings, legal research, drafting of judgments and orders, case management, and digitization of court records. Additional time may also be allocated for interactive exercises, real-life case studies, and practical demonstrations. It would also be beneficial to provide participants with training materials and reference resources for future use.

7	Beenish Ismail Syed	beenishismailsyed@gmail.com		Excellent	75%	75%	75%	To ensure optimal learning outcomes, AI and IT training programs should not adopt a standardized, one-size-fits-all curriculum. Given the varying skill levels among participants, standardized content often proves overly simplistic for advanced learners while presenting significant challenges for beginners. Consequently, course structures ought to be tailored according to the results of a pre-evaluation assessment. Participants may be classified into two groups and trained accordingly.
